The 10-minute leak check

Tick every statement that is true today. Unticked boxes show where your next client may be getting lost.

- ☒ My offer names one clear outcome for one clear customer group.
- ☒ My ads separate locations, audiences or services instead of targeting “everyone in the UAE”.
- ☒ My website works comfortably on a phone and loads without making people wait.
- ☒ A customer can call, message on WhatsApp or enquire without hunting for contact details.
- ☒ My Google Business Profile shows accurate hours, services, photos and contact information.
- ☒ My prices, delivery area and key terms are clear where customers need them.
- ☒ My content is adapted to Dubai life and seasonal context, not copied from another market.
- ☒ I can identify which campaign or channel produced each qualified enquiry.
- ☒ I follow up quickly with a useful next step rather than a generic auto-response.
- ☒ I only use claims, reviews, data and customer details I can lawfully support.

YOUR QUICK SCORE

8–10: tighten the details · 5–7: fix the biggest leak first · 0–4: simplify the whole journey

1 Trying to speak to everyone in the UAE

Dubai is one city, but it is not one audience. A broad message usually becomes vague: it names no neighbourhood, need, language preference, buying moment or reason to choose you.

WARNING SIGNS

- One campaign covers every service, customer type and location.
- The opening message could belong to any competitor in any country.
- Ad clicks are coming in, but the enquiries are low-fit or price-only.

FIX THIS FIRST

- Choose one priority segment and one outcome per campaign.
- Split campaigns by intent, service or realistic delivery area when the data supports it.
- Use English, Arabic or both only where it helps that audience; do not translate word-for-word without checking tone and meaning.

DO THIS NOW

Complete this sentence: “We help [specific Dubai customer] achieve [clear outcome] without [main frustration].”

2

Paying for attention before earning local trust

A visitor deciding between unfamiliar businesses looks for proof that you are real, reachable and relevant locally. Missing details create doubt before your sales message has a chance to work.

WARNING SIGNS

- Business hours, service area or contact details differ across channels.
- Your Google Business Profile is incomplete or rarely updated.
- Reviews and case examples are generic, unsupported or disconnected from the offer.

FIX THIS FIRST

- Keep your name, phone, hours and service area consistent everywhere.
- Add current photos, specific services and an honest description to your Google Business Profile.
- Ask real customers for specific reviews; never buy, script or invent them.

DO THIS NOW

Open your business on Google from a customer's phone. Can they understand, trust and contact you in 30 seconds?

3

Sending mobile clicks into a dead end

In Dubai, the journey often continues on a phone — from social media or search to a website, call or WhatsApp conversation. Every extra step gives a ready buyer a reason to leave.

WARNING SIGNS

- The ad lands on a generic homepage instead of the promised service.
- The next step is hidden, slow, broken or asks for too much information.
- Messages receive a vague reply with no useful question, time or booking option.

FIX THIS FIRST

- Match each ad to one focused page or conversation path.
- Offer one primary next step: call, WhatsApp, book or enquire.
- Prepare a human follow-up that confirms the need, location and preferred timing.

DO THIS NOW

Tap your own ad journey on mobile data. Count the seconds and taps from first click to a confirmed next step.

4 Copying a global content calendar into Dubai

Generic content misses the rhythms people actually experience here. Local relevance comes from timing, context and useful detail — not from adding a skyline to an otherwise unchanged post.

WARNING SIGNS

- The same creative runs through Ramadan, Eid, summer and peak retail periods.
- Offers go live too late for customers to plan or compare.
- Content uses cultural moments as decoration without adapting the message or service.

FIX THIS FIRST

- Plan key moments 6–8 weeks ahead, then confirm dates and campaign rules.
- Adapt opening hours, delivery expectations, tone and creative to the real customer context.
- Keep a useful always-on layer so the brand does not disappear between seasonal bursts.

DO THIS NOW

List the next three UAE moments that genuinely affect customer intent, operations or timing — and ignore the rest.

5

Optimising for clicks instead of qualified clients

Reach and clicks can look busy while revenue stays flat. The useful question is not “Did people engage?” but “Did the right people take the next step, and what happened after?”

WARNING SIGNS

- Reports stop at views, clicks or follower growth.
- Leads are counted without checking quality, booked calls or sales.
- Customer data, consent and promotional claims are handled casually.

FIX THIS FIRST

- Define one commercial goal and the qualified action that leads to it.
- Track source → enquiry → qualified lead → sale, even with a simple weekly sheet.
- Use only supportable claims and handle personal data in line with current UAE requirements; get professional advice for your situation.

DO THIS NOW

For every AED spent, can you show how many qualified enquiries, booked calls and sales followed?

TURN THE CHECKLIST INTO ACTION

One focused month beats another month of random posting

Assign one owner, one deadline and one measure to every action. Keep the plan small enough to finish.

WEEK 1 — CLARITY

- Choose one priority customer, offer and outcome.
- Write one plain-language value proposition.
- Correct local business details across your main channels.

WEEK 2 — JOURNEY

- Test the website and enquiry path on a phone.
- Create one focused destination for the priority offer.
- Prepare a useful WhatsApp or email follow-up.

WEEK 3 — CAMPAIGN

- Build one audience-message-offer combination.
- Set a test budget you can afford to learn from.
- Confirm creative, claims and data handling before launch.

WEEK 4 — LEARNING

- Review qualified enquiries, not only clicks.
- Record objections and questions from real conversations.
- Keep, change or stop based on evidence — not instinct.

THE RULE: ONE CLEAR OFFER → ONE CLEAR NEXT STEP → ONE WEEKLY REVIEW

Do not scale spend until the customer journey works and the lead quality is visible.

KEEP THIS GUIDE HONEST

Use the checks as a decision aid, not a promise of results or legal advice.
