3 REASONS PEOPLE SCROLL PAST YOUR ADS.

What we see in almost every ad account we audit, one thing you can try today for each, and what the full fix looks like.

BEFORE YOU START

MOST ADS DON'T FAIL BECAUSE OF THE BUDGET.

They fail in the first two seconds, when someone decides whether your ad is worth their attention. Spend more on an ad people skip, and you just pay for more people to skip it.

The three reasons in this guide cause most of that skipping. Each one comes with a quick test and one fix you can try today. The full fix depends on your market, your customers and your numbers, so that part we work out with you in a free audit.

HOW TO USE THIS

Take each quick test with your best-performing ad open. Where you answer “no”, start there.

01

YOU'RE SELLING THE PRODUCT, NOT WHAT PEOPLE WANT.

Why it costs you: Nobody wants UV400 lenses. They want to look good in every photo from the trip. Ads that list features make the viewer do the translating, and most won't bother. They scroll.

QUICK TEST

Read the first line of your best ad. Does it name something your customer wants, or something your product has?

TRY THIS TODAY

Every product answers several wants. Pick the single strongest one and put it in the first line, in the words your customers use.

The full fix, covered in your free audit

- ☐ Which want is strongest for your customers (it's rarely the one on your website)
- ☐ Where to find it: your reviews, comments and competitors' ads
- ☐ How to turn it into three hooks worth testing

02

YOUR AD TALKS TO EVERYONE THE SAME WAY.

Why it costs you: A stranger who doesn't know they have a problem and a shopper comparing you to three other brands need completely different messages. One ad for both lands with neither.

QUICK TEST

Does the same ad run for people who've never heard of you and people who visited your site last week?

TRY THIS TODAY

Strangers need the problem named. Comparers need proof. People who nearly bought need a reason to act now. That's three ads, not one.

The full fix, covered in your free audit

- ☐ The awareness level most of your market is at today
- ☐ How crowded your market is, and how bold your claim has to be to cut through
- ☐ Which message goes to which audience, and in what order

03

YOU CHANGE THE WRONG THING WHEN AN AD STOPS WORKING.

Why it costs you: When results drop, most owners change the audience or the budget. Far more often the creative is tired, or the hook never landed in the first place. So the money keeps leaking.

QUICK TEST

In Ads Manager, check how many people are still watching at 2 seconds. Is it less than half?

TRY THIS TODAY

If under half are still watching at 2 seconds, the hook is the problem, not the targeting. Fix the first line and the first frame before touching anything else.

The full fix, covered in your free audit

- ☐ The other numbers that tell you which part of the ad is failing
- ☐ Eight things you can change in a winning ad to make a fresh one, and the order to test them
- ☐ How many new ads your budget needs each month so results don't fade
